RE: TD Canada Trust bank account for NWAV 44

To whom it may concern,

New Ways of Analyzing Variation (NWAV 44), the premiere scholarly conference in the study of language variation and change, will be jointly hosted by the University of Toronto and York University October 22-25, 2015. Details are at <http://linguistics.utoronto.ca/nwav44/>.

The organizing committee is comprised of the following faculty members:

Philip Angermeyer, Michol Hoffman and James Walker, Department of Literatures,
Languages and Linguistics, York University

Naomi Nagy and Sali A. Tagliamonte, Department of Linguistics, University of Toronto

Anne-José Villeneuve, Department of French, University of Toronto

The University of Toronto has secured a federal grant from the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada, to support the conference. NWAV needs a bank account to handle the registration payments for professional and student attendees. Funds will cover the costs associated with the conference (e.g., room reservations, audiovisual services, catering, materials). Naomi Nagy and Anne-José Villeneuve will handle transactions related to the TD bank account.

For the past several years, NWAV has attracted 250–360 scholars, including leaders in the field of language variation and change, and sociolinguistics more generally. The organizing committee anticipates upwards of 350 attendees in 2015.

Should you require further information for the account application, please contact us.

Yours sincerely,
