Hi guys,

I understand. At least have a look at my lovely powerpoint (very short!) to give you the view on our venue and plans.

This NWAV will not be like any other!

I know you will do what you can.

Keep me posted and let me know if there is anything I can do to help.

Sali

Hi Sali,

This is all under discussion here- apologies for our silence in the meantime. Due to this being a poor show for us in the many years past that I have attended (some of the reasons for which I enumerated to you last time we met up) we decided a couple years back to stop having this be a manned stand, and instead send only a few books as display copies. This decision led to a fixed budget for NWAV, and conference budgets get set over a year ahead of time (as all shows and all disciplines are planned for- we attend literally hundreds across the company, and are trying to cut back every year due to their massive expense).

We definitely appreciate your and Jack's emails and we are discussing how to do something especially in the wake of Making Waves (yes, a wave pun) and we'll be in touch shortly but we need to think creatively about the existing budget we have for it.

Cheers,
Danie

Hi Julia and Danielle,

Let me know if you are the appropriate people for the attached information.

As you can see from the earlier email from Jack Chambers, we are really enthused about the venue and plan for NWAV 44 and we hope you will be able to put Wiley-Blackwell, one of our central publishers in Sociolinguistics and Language Variation and Change front and centre at our conference.

I think you'll be pleased what we have planned for publishers. Please see the attached documents!

Let me know if you have any questions!

My best to you,
Sali
